CERTIFICATE OVERVIEW

A position of authority requires skills in leadership and management. Management requires planning and is often concrete, while Leadership is often abstract. It requires exerting the right kinds of influence to get people to follow. Learning managing skills is important and necessary, but learning the nuances, limitations, appropriateness and effectiveness, of when, where, how and why to use those skills when dealing with people, will give a higher probability of success. Leadership demands humility, openness and the will to evolve and self-assess. It requires an understanding of human nature including; the dynamics of personalities, motivators, personal values, culture, and the power of bias and beliefs.

The Certificate in Practical Leadership will give participants an opportunity to better self-assess and develop the attributes needed to be a successful leader. A leader that people will be willing to follow.

Participants must complete all seminars, within a two-year period.
